Poison Prevention

If you live in an average American household, chances are that you have at least 40 (of the more than 250,000) available toxic substances in your home. Many of them are likely to be stored where children can reach them easily; you may not even recognize that some are poison. The National Safety Council reports that every 60 seconds, 1,400 times a day, 500,000 times a year, some child swallows a potential poison. As many as 400 deaths occur in a year to children under five, while more than 40,000 children of this age are hospitalized.

Good habits and attitudes toward drugs and medications can be instilled early. But before a child is old enough to comprehend, the parent has to do most of the protecting. Even the preschooler who really does understand your rules and warnings may sometimes be more curious than cautious about that intriguing little bottle.

Although National Poison Prevention Week was March 19-25, basic precautions should be taken year round to protect against poisoning. Some of these precautions are:

1. Keep all drugs and medications out of a youngster's reach. Keep the medicine cabinet locked if possible, or at least securely latched.
2. Be careful not to leave medications lying around on a night table, dresser, bathroom basin, or other place convenient to tiny finger.
3. Never tell children that medicine, even if it tastes good, is candy.
4. Never leave a bottle of medicine in a young child's room; put it safely away after the bedtime dose.
5. Buy bottles and containers fitted with safety closures.
6. Destroy unused prescription medicines when treatment is complete.

Before treating any poisoning, be sure you know exactly what substance has caused it. Call a doctor or Poison Control Center first. The Poison Control Center which serves the Appomattox County area is located at Lynchburg General-Marshall Lodge Hospital (telephone (804) 528-2066).

Alteration Technique: Replacing Zipper

By K. Lonnette Marsh
Extension Agent

Garments should not be pushed to the back of the closet or discarded because minor alterations need to be done. You can do them just as easy as getting someone to do them, if you just take the time.

Have you ever been in a hurry and in the process of getting dressed gotten your zipper stuck? Instead of changing clothes or taking time to try to fix the zipper, you quickly did a rush job that resulted in a zipper broken beyond repair.

A brozen zipper can be replaced with a few simple steps.

To replace a lap zipper in a skirt:

1. Pull out the thread holding the old zipper. Also, open the waistband or neckline facing far enough to take the zipper out.
2. If the seam is frayed, it should be finished to prevent further fraying.
3. Place the bottom of the zipper even with the bottom of the placket opening. Hand baste the zipper tape to the underfold. Make sure the folded edge of the placket lines up close to the zipper teeth.
4. Turn the garment upside down. Starting at the bottom of the zipper stitch over basting. Backstitch. Remove basting thread.
5. Put the top fold over the zipper. Make sure to cover previous stitching. Pin.
6. On right side, hand baste across bottom of zipper, then up along the side (follow the old line of stitching).
7. Starting at the bottom, stitch over basting. Remove all basting threads.
8. Restitch the waistband or neckline facing in place. Press. To replace a zipper in the fly front of trousers, slacks or jeans:
1. Use a zipper labeled for trousers (except for female slacks).
2. Open the waistband seam or both sides of the fly opening.
3. Turn to the inside of the opening. Pull out the thread holding the old zipper. Do not go below the bottom of the placket nor take out the crosswise stitching at the bottom of the placket. The crosswise stitching reinforces the bottom of the placket.
4. Remove stitches from the left side of the trousers to get the facing loose.
5. Turn to the outside of the pants. Place the closed zipper between the fold and the shield. The zipper may be above the top edge of the trousers. If the zipper is extended more than ½ inch above the waistline seams, adjustments should be made. Adjust the length of the zipper by cutting the additional length off the bottom of the zipper. (Finish the bottom of the zipper by whipstitching several times over coil or chain of zipper).
6. Hand baste zipper in place. Stitch along the old stitching line, starting at the bottom.
7. Sew the waistband bank in place on the side where you stitched the zipper. Follow the old line of stitching.
8. Close the zipper. Put the top side of the fly placket over the zipper. Pin and baste it down so the fly will be flat.
9. Now turn to the inside of the pants again. Pin the loose edge of the zipper tape of the facing only.
10. On the outside, pull out the basting which held the fly flat. Open the zipper and machine-stitch the zipper tape to the facing only, with two rows of stitching ¼ inch apart.
11. Pin the facing in place. Stitch along the old stitching line.
12. Sew the waistband back in place.

The Now Washbasket

By Steffne Miller

Even though January 1st is behind us, it's never too late to make New Year's resolutions. Here are the Now Washbasket's Laundry Resolutions for 1979. I resolve to. . .

1. Wash clothes without guesswork by reading garment care labels.
2. Measure all detergent and additives, using manufacturer's recommended amounts.
3. Mend rips and tears in clothes before washing them and close zippers and fasteners to prevent further tearing or snagging.
4. Pre-treat stains so they don't become permanently set. Hint: Consider using a laundry additive such as Borateem. It helps remove most stains without harming washable fabrics and colors. Experts say it is most beneficial when added to every washload along with detergent.
5. Remove clothes from the dryer at the end of the cycle to prevent wrinkling.

2. a local board of public welfare or social services
3. the child's parent or legal guardian; and

THE NATIONAL FLOOD INSURANCE PROGRAM

and Walnut Streets, Philadelphia, Penn. 19106 - (215) 597-9581.

Who may purchase a flood insurance policy? Any owner of property (a building or its contents) located in a community approved for the sale of flood insurance. Under the program, tenants in eligible communities may also insure their personal property against flood loss.

How does one buy flood insurance? After a community qualifies for the sale of flood insurance a policy may be bought from any property insurance agent or broker licensed to do business in the state where the property is located.

Is there a waiting period? For communities in the program there is a 5-day waiting period from the date of purchase until the policy becomes effective. If a policy is purchased on March 1, the waiting period begins at 12:01 a.m. March 2 and the coverage becomes effective at 12:01 on March 7. When a community first joins the emergency program, there is no waiting period for individuals for the first 30 days. The 5-day waiting period is also waived for the first 30 days after the community enters the regular program.

What types of property can be insured against flood loss? Buildings and their contents only. Almost every type of walled and roofed building that is principally above ground can be insured. This would include a mobile home on a foundation. Also eligible are the contents of a fully enclosed building.

What kinds of property are not insurable under the program? Gas and liquid storage tanks, wharves, piers, bulkheads, growing crops, shrubbery, land, livestock, roads, motor vehicles, etc.

What types of losses are covered? All direct losses by "flood" are covered. "Flood" is defined in the policy as a general and temporary condition of partial or complete inundation of normally dry land areas, from overflow of inland or tidal waters, or from the unusual and rapid accumulation or runoff of surface waters from any source, or from mudflows."

Also covered are losses resulting from land collapse caused by water activity exceeding established levels. The flood policy will not cover damage caused by a loss in progress.

Is damaged from ice and snow covered? In the current situation, damage from ice and snow is covered if it is caused by flooding. For example, if a large piece of ice, moved along by a flood, damages a structure, coverage is provided. But if a piece of ice slides down a hill, unaided by a flood, and crashes into a structure, it is not covered. The policy does not cover loss from freezing, thawing, ice or water pressure except when flooding is simultaneously involved.

Can a policy be cancelled? The cancellation provisions in the policy are limited to failure to pay the premium; fraud; sale of the property to another person; unusual circumstances as when a lender requires flood insurance because a purchaser is borrowing money to buy property in a flood hazard area and it is later discovered the flood map is incorrect. If, for some reason, a person doesn't want to continue his insurance, the policy is allowed to expire.

How does one file a claim for flood loss? A policy holder reports the flood loss immediately to his insurance agent.

What happens if an identified flood-prone community does not qualify for the Emergency Program within the recommended time.

By law, federal agencies may not approve any federal monies for the purchase, construction or improvement of property in the community's identified flood-prone areas. Certain types of disaster relief assistance also won't be available.

Flood insurance policies are issued by the Department of Housing and Urban Development through local agents. Residents wanting basic information about coverage may call the National Flood Insurance Program at a toll-free number (800) 638-6620. Northern Virginia Citizens may call 897-9341

Because of the reasonable rates and the long-standing need for national flood insurance - and the fact it is new - this is the fastest growing insurance program in America.

For additional information, contact W. R. Britton, Emergency Services Coordinator, at the Appomattox Town Office.

The average U.S. worker works 37 hours, 6 minutes per week.

WHAT'S IN IT FOR YOU?

More Service, Less Cost

...nt and proper governm... can help keep ...f some things ... is high as they otherwise ... ight.

One example is the chance the government has to help increase competition among airlines.

Two major carriers, one that flies primarily within the country, National, and one that flies around the world, Pan Am, would like to merge.

Each of these carriers is "lean" and efficient. Together they can become even more efficient, serving more places at home and abroad. This would present more competition to airlines in the United States and to foreign-flag carriers.

All this can lead to increased services at decreased costs for travelers flying on the newly merged airline and on all the other airlines with which it competes.
